What is the changing lives initiative?

Group Based parent programmes are recommended as the first course of intervention for young children with behaviour consistent with ADHD. [1,2,3]

The Changing Lives Initiative is a community-based initiative creating a better understanding about ADHD and providing an intervention programme for families with children (3-7) experiencing behaviour consistent with ADHD.

Information and Awareness Sessions for Teachers and Early Years Practitioners

ADHD related symptoms and learning problems are examined.

Participants are introduced to techniques, interventions and strategies to enhance outcomes and ensure success for these children.

Participants are provided with solutions to common academic and behavioral problems related to ADHD.

What can you do now?

You can recommend The Changing Lives Initiative to families with children aged 3-7 and they can attend an information and awareness session.

The team can be contacted directly by your clients, or someone on their behalf, to arrange individual information and awareness and screening sessions.

If you have a number of clients who may be interested and suitable for the Changing Lives Initiative we are happy to organise an information and awareness session.

We still have a few places available for Parent Programmes beginning in mid-January, in Suffolk Community Centre and Holy Trinity Youth Centre, families that may be suitable should get in touch ASAP.
